REFLECTION

Reflection for the 14th Sunday of ordinary time year A

In today’s Gospel, we hear Jesus praying to the Father and thanking him from hiding things from the learned and showing them to children. One would think that in order to understand certain things about our Faith we need to have more than the minds of children.

Before the election of Pope Benedict many years ago I can remember telling my class that there was a real possibility I could be elected and if so I would not be in tomorrow. The next day several students looked shocked when they saw me sitting at my desk, they really thought I was going to be elected.

As a child, many of us believed that heaven was a place in the clouds, we knew that Jesus lived there and one day we would go there. It is only as we get older that we may start to question whether it is really there and whether we will one day end up there. Deep down we know that it is true, but nevertheless we question.

So when we are told in the Gospels that in order to enter the Kingdom of Heaven we need to be like little children, it doesn’t mean that we need to regress and start wearing a baseball cap saying that everything is “cool”. What it means is that in some way we need to retain a sense of wonder and awe when we think of God and heaven. We need to leave our cynicism to one side and use our imagination to contemplate the wonders of God.

It is then that our Faith will strengthen and our relationship with God will become a step closer.
