REFLECTION

Twenty Fourth Sunday of ordinary time year B

Last week I was searching for something I had lost, I prayed to St Anthony, but as yet I have still to find it. In the mean time I came across an old photo of myself from the time I started university. It was quite shocking to see this young man without a care in the world looking back at me. I began to think about how at that time I thought I knew everything and how I was going to change the world. Although I am a totally different person now, I am in essence still that young man in the photo.

When Jesus asks the Apostles, “Who do people say I am?” It is not a trick question, he is not trying to catch them out, he wants to remind them that he is the Son of God and will have to suffer at some point. The Apostles have become his friends and have grown close to him, they will have seen Jesus change and grow. Right from the time of the Nativity in Bethlehem Jesus as the Son of God has been destined to redeem humanity. He may have grown into a Man, but he has always had the same mission.

We all grow and change, and we can find it hard when those we love change and move on, but since our Baptism we all share in the one mission which is to live as a follower of Jesus. We have the mission to spread his word and to profess his name.
